

Purple Sage Profiles

Iris Minc founded Purple Sage Pottery 30 years ago to create her own work and share her love of clay with students and fellow potters. Iris has been developing her own unique style since graduating from college in 1981, designing her own molds, stamps and other tools to make her work truly one-of-a-kind. Her independent style and positive nature carries into her classes, where she helps her students materialize their concepts.

Anni Melancon has been a studio potter in Gloucester since 1978. For 27 years she has generously shared with her students at Purple Sage her broad experience with clay and glaze techniques. Anni's expertise includes decorative and functional stoneware, majolica, raku and pit firing.

Lisa Mistretta brings her passion for clay and easy going nature to her pottery classes. Students will benefit from her creativity and depth of knowledge, as she inspires them to take their creative energy to the next level.

Jenny Graf's connection to clay began in childhood as she watched her grandfather throw pots on his kick wheel. Jenny has been establishing her own voice in clay since 2007 and is thrilled to share her love of clay with her students.

Meryl Goldsmith's passion for pottery began in high school. Although her degree is in Broadcast Communications, pottery continues to be a big part of her life. Whether by teaching classes at Purple Sage Pottery, or making and selling her own work, creating pottery is her passion.

Becca Sands studied ceramics, sculpture and painting at High Point University. She quickly took to clay and was drawn to surface decoration, using bright colors and intricate designs. Becca strives to help her students find their unique creative voice and love of clay.

Classes for Adults

Purple Sage Pottery offers classes for adults taught by teachers as committed to teaching as they are to pottery. While grounded in the fundamentals of hand building, throwing and glazing, we strive to nurture your creative spirit. Classes are small, having at most 9 students. You can take full advantage of our well equipped studios, including electric wheels, slab rollers, extruders and various tools. We recycle the clay for you, which greatly improves your pot making experience. An extensive selection of beautiful reduction fired glazes is available. Your work is handled with great care, and we pride ourselves on the exceptional results we get from our 70 cubic foot gas fired kiln.

Saturday Open Studio

9:30am - 5:00pm

Saturday Open Studio Time is available to former and current students. No instruction is offered during this time period. Current students benefit from additional studio time between classes and former students may work independently. Either may bring a guest under their guidance. First time guests may attend free-of-charge. A link for our sign-up sheet is available at purplesagepottery.com.

Saturdays with class: an additional $60 will cover students for 10 weeks in conjunction with a class. This fee is kept low to encourage students to practice. Current students may, however, pay $17 per Saturday or $8 per hour.

Former students and guests: may pay $70 a month, $22 per Saturday or $9 per hour.
